

The Global Lawyer, which focuses on the role of the lawyer in our contemporary, global society, is a useful book for students and experts alike. Its wide-ranging chapters provide a broad perspective to help future lawyers and other legal services stakeholders understand why being a “Global Lawyer” matters. Later chapters drill down on these ideas by focusing on the specific knowledge, skill sets, and values that will make one a more effective lawyer in a global environment. The book is well-structured with useful Case Studies and Activities, as well as Review Questions that provide formative assessment opportunities. The Further Reading section at the end of each chapter ensures that this book not only is a useful teaching tool, but a useful resource for practicing lawyers and experts.

Professor Laurel Terry

Professor of Law and H. Laddie Montague Jr. Chair in Law

Dickinson Law

The Pennsylvania State University